Dear Dad & Bee —

Yesterday was a big occasion for us when our first batch of mail came through. Everybody was jubilant with a stack of fifteen to twenty-five letters. I guess they must have held up all mail coming to that temporary APO number. Many thanks for your various letters. I hope you keep 'em [strikeout] coming.

Was quite upset when I didn't have any mail from Pam in my array of eighteen letters but realized [struck: what] why when Ronnie's letter explained that Pam had had a brain concussion. When I spoke to Pam from Seattle she casually mentioned she was in the hospital but didn't say what was wrong. I naturally thought nothing much of it and let it go at that. I never thought to ask you when I had you on the phone a few days ago.

I was kinda worried so I decided to call her which I did this morning. She sounded in good spirits and said she was lots better. Please write me how she's coming along until she's able to write herself.

No more now but I did want you to know I'd received your first letters.

All love — Bobby
