Introduction

In February 1950, Senator Joseph McCarthy alleged in a speech in West Virginia that more than 200 staff members at the Department of State were known to be members of the Communist Party. During Harry Truman's press conference on March 30, the President characterized McCarthy's behavior as a Republican attempt to "sabotage the bipartisan foreign policy" and McCarthy as "the best asset that the Kremlin can have." A transcript of that press conference is available at the American Presidency Project.

In this personal letter to Secretary of State Dean Acheson written the following day, Truman first sent his best wishes for Acheson's daughter Mary, who was recovering from tuberculosis. Truman concluded the letter with a condemnation of McCarthy and Senator Kenneth Wherry, the Republican leader in the Senate: "I think we have these 'animals' on the run. Privately, I refer to McCarthy as a pathological liar, and Wherry as the block-headed undertaker from Nebraska. Of course, we can't do that publicly, but there's no doubt that's exactly what they are." For Truman, Acheson was a loyal and vital member of the government and McCarthy was merely a partisan bully exploiting Cold War fears. McCarthy's rampant accusations of disloyalty and communist sympathies continued until his attempt to discredit the US Army backfired. In 1954, the Senate voted to censure McCarthy.

Questions for Discussion

Read the introduction and examine the image of President Truman's letter and the photograph of Truman's press conference. Then apply your knowledge of American history to answer the questions that follow:

 Note—The introduction references the press conference of March 30, 1950 which is shown in the photograph. It is beneficial to follow the suggested link to the transcript of that event http://www.presidency.ucsb.edu/ws/index.php?pid=13755) and to concentrate on the segment beginning with the question by a member of the press corps, "Do you think that Senator McCarthy can show any disloyalty exists in the State Department?" and continuing through the question and answer segment to the President's response, "The greatest asset that the Kremlin has is the partisan attempt in the Senate to sabotage the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States."

1. Assign students in groups to research the stated positions of each of the following regarding United States national security during the Cold War: Senator Joseph McCarthy;

Harry S. Truman to Dean Acheson, March 31, 1950

- Secretary of State Dean Acheson; Senator Kenneth S. Wherry; President Harry S. Truman.
- 2. What do you think influenced Truman, in the final paragraph of his letter, to refer to Senators McCarthy and Wherry as "animals"?
- 3. How does President Truman explain his statement that "McCarthy's antics are the best asset that the Kremlin can have."
- 4. Explain how both Truman's letter and the press conference illustrate partisan political concerns over national security during the Cold War.

Image

008975 THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON At Key West, Florida March 31, 1950 Dear Dean: I appreciated most highly your letter of the 28th, and what I appreciated most was the fact that Mrs. Acheson had good news with regard to your daughter. Mrs. Truman and I have been very much interested in her welfare and recovery. I am attaching a copy of the press conference which I held yesterday. I want you to know exactly what was said, so there can be no misinterpretations. I tried my best to nail the issue down, as you and Vandenberg and Stimson have been outlining it, and as I outlined it to Bridges and Vandenberg in my two personal let-I think we have these "animals" on the run. Privately, I refer to McCarthy as a pathological liar, and Wherry as the block-headed undertaker from Nebraska. Of course, we can't do that publicly, but there's no doubt that's exactly what they are. Sincerely yours Hon. Dean Acheson Secretary of State Washington, D. C.

Harry S. Truman to Dean Acheson, March 31, 1950 (The Gilder Lehrman Institute, GLC00782.22)

Harry S. Truman to Dean Acheson, March 31, 1950

Press conference with Harry S. Truman, March 30, 1950; Accession number: 72-4697; Truman Library, National Archives and Records Administration.